THE LAST CRIME OF BILL RODIFER, A FAMOUN DESPERADO.

His Death Brought About by the Courage of Woman who Found Him Under the Red His Fierce Struggle with her Husband. News comes from Indiana that Bill Rodifer died at 4 o'clock last Tuesday morning with his boots on. While he was yet a boy, William C. Rodifer escaped from the Reform Behool Prison at Plainfield, Ind., but was recaptured and put in irons. A second time he escaped with the ball and chain attached to one leg. He lay down close beside a railroad track, and covered himself up with woods and grass so as to avoid observation. Then he put the chain across the rail. When the train came along it cut the chain, and he made good his escape with only an iron anklet to encumber him. Five years ago he capped a remarkable series of escapes by climbing a sixty-foot perpendicular pipe to the top of the State Prison South, in Jeffersonville, Indiana. He was then twenty-two years six feet high. He had bright brown hair, and a clear complexion, dashed with a dainty light brown moustache. At the time of this escape his fame ran through the State and across cape his fame ran through the State and across the borders. Young women wrote him notes of symonthy and admiration. He was a daring young brigand, with all the virtues except honesty and a regard for human life. So great an impression did his exploits and his youth make upon the community, that he had popular sympathy on his side against the law. Nevertheless, a pardon was not obtained until last July. After that time he lived with his mother. Mrs. Sinks, in Indianapolis. He was rarely seen in the street by the neighbors, and the impression prevailed that he was leading a quiet, penitent lite after the adventures and crimes of his youth.

Sinks, in Indianapolis. Ho was rarely seen in the street by the neighbors, and the impression prevailed that he was leading a quiet, penitent lite after the adventures and crimes of his youth.

Dr. I. C. Walker of Indianapolis on Tuesday afternoon related the following story of a visit that Rodifer made to his house:

"At about 3 o'clock this morning I was awakened by my wife telling me that the ras was unaccountably low. We keep a jet lighted in the hall during the night in case of a call or other emergency. I got out of bed and elevated it to the usual height, thinking that the pressure was unavaily light, and saying to Mrs. Walker that that was doubtless the cause of its burning so low, and returned to bed. That did not satisfy her, however. She imagined that the turning down of the light meant something, and, woman-like, looked under the bed. She saw the feet of a man sticking out toward the west wall, near the head of the bed, and here comes the most remarkable part of the story. She knew I was awake, and copsidered that if she told me there was a man under the bed I would grapple him, and he, undoubtedly being armed, would kill me. So she arose and went to the boys' rooms and awakened them carefully, telling them there was a man under mach our bed, and for them to get up quickly and waten while she went down stairs for a revolver. When she earne back she gave it to John, remembering, even in that moment of supreme peril, that Frank had just recovered from a long spell of sickness, and was consequently wesk and nervous. She then went along the hall to the room of the colored man, whom she knew had a revolver also. She then returned and went into Frank's room, where the two boys were.

"In the mean time I began wondering what She was about, and just after she passed the door the second time I heard a slight rustling under the bed. Lurned over loward the side she had vacated, and met the gaze of a man whose head alone was raised over the bed rain near the foot, watching me. The state of affairs flashed acros ten years of mprisonment in Jeffersonville. Dudley plended not guilty, but he was sentenced for nine years. It was while he was in jail in Terre Haute awaiting transfer to Jeffersonville that he married the woman from whom Shaler had been divorced. In December of that same year, 1874, he escaped by mounting to the top of the outer wall on a ladder and sliding down a waterfulpe on the outside, He ran to Memphis in Clarke County that evening. He went into a store toget something to eat, and was recognized and chased. A number of citizens kept up a running fire on the fugitive. He got a horse, and would have made good his cacape, but he was struck in the small of his hack with a club thrown at him from a distance by one of his pursuers. He fell from the horse and was obliged to surrender. The warden of the prison, on getting possession of him again, ironed him, locked him in a cell, and placed him under a special guard. Nevertheless he escaped by climbing an iron pipe has above narrated. Before his last recusture he entered the residence of Mr. Terrill, a citizen of Jeffersonville, and took a suit of clothes in exchange for his prison garb, threatening to knock out Mr. Terrill's brains if he made a noise. He was captured by a parry of citizons armed with guas, and by them returned to the prison. His father was a veteran of the Mexican war. His sister, who is highly spoken of, lives with her mother at 208 Bright street, Indianapolis, She teaches music.

FIFTY-SEVEN CAPTURED TRAMPS.

for Vugrant Lodgers. The lumber yard of John Crouch & Co., at the corner of West and Houston streets, covers fifteen city lots, and is stacked with many thou-sands of feet of lumber. For years past it has been a lodging place for tramps of all descrip-tions. It is surrounded by a ten-foot fence, but the tramps either climbed this or entered by removing a board. As many as 150 men have slept there in one night in summer time, and even in midwinter there were generally some lodgers. The piles of lumber are full of niches and ledges, into which the tramps huddled to-gether like rats. The lumber firm have made many efforts to get rid of them, but after being driven out they would return when the watch-

It was feared that a stray cigar stub or hot ashes from a pipe might set fire to and destroy thousands of dollars' worth of lumber. The tramps would drop into the yard between 10 thousands of dollars worth of lumber. The tramps would drop into the yard between 10 and 12 o'clock at night, and the first comers secured the smoothest boards. Many would bring tomato cans filled with stale beer, the drainings of kegs set out in front of salcons. On this they would become drunk and fight all night. At 5 o'clock in the morning they roused the macives, shook out their lattered clothing, one by one dropped over the fences, and by 7 o'clock all would be gone.

Despairing of ridding themselves by their own means of these uncleasant visitors, the firm applied to Capt. Hedden of the Charles street police station for assistance. Yesterday morning at 3 o'clock, when it was still very dark, a squad of policemen surrounded the yard on every side. Capt. Hedden, with Detectives Dilks and Flannagan and Mr. Discsway of the lumber firm, entered the yard. A warning cry announced that their presence had been discovered. The light of a dark lantern showed men springing out of holes on every side and running for the fences. It was a scene of great confusion. Several were collared inside the yard. The others dropped over the fences into the arms of the bolicemen in waiting. They came so thickly that a majority escaped. Every policeman had three or four prisoners, and fifty-seven tramps were arrested in all. The patter of fleeting steps could be heard on all sides as the lucky ones escaped. The prisoners were crowded into the bossment of the police station until 8 o'clock, when they were marched in procession to the Jefferson Market Police Court.

After the disposal of the regular morning watch the tramps were straigned in a double line before Justice Murray. Their ages ranged from 20 to 60 years. Their ciothing was in all stages of dilapidation. A more wretched, ragged, drunken, and dirty set had not been seen in court in a long time. Their ciothing was in all stages of dilapidation. A Report of Examining Architects Calculated

The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund passed a resolution early this month request-ing the Fire Commissioners to cause a resurvey of the Fulton Market buildings to be made. The Fire Commissioners directed William P. Esterbrook, Inspector of Buildings, to make the survey in accordance with the building law of this city. The examination of the building was made by Mr. Esterbrook, Napoleon Le Brun of the Committee of Examiners of the New York Chapter of Architects, and Havilah M. Smith, who was appointed a coexaminer by Alian Campbell, Commissioner of the Department of Works and Construction of the unblie Buildings. These gentlemen reported to the Fire Commis-sioners on Weinesday, the 18th inst. Their re-inningues. In compliance with your instructions we do hereby respectfully report. That we have examined and made a resurvey of the Poston Market, being the building bounded by Beckman, south Fulton, and Front streets, and find it to be in a very denset and dangerous condition. It has been aftered at various times since its eyection by removing brick and stone plers of large size, both inside and outside of the buildings, and in most cases substituting small from posts in their stead, so that the building has not the base to stand upon which it did have when first erected. A muniber of foundation piers have settled and otherwise partially crambled, and others follows. In fact, the building constitute would be a great waste of that it is messive or an analytic would be a great waste of that it is messive to the immediately bleen due to be immediately taken down.

The Fire Commissioners sent the report to Mayor Cooper yesterday. The Mayor at once wrote Computabler Kelly, informing him of the character of the Fire Department's survey of the market building, and adding that, in his opinion, the Finance Department, which has charge of the occupation and management of the markets, should immediately cause the occupants of the Fulton Market and its cellars to be removed, and the market closed until it shall be determined what further action should be taken.
